Cloud Bangle Pin. The Bangle to on one side has a monogram; the other the year 1853. It was a gold dollar.

One small gold bangle about the size of a gold gocent piece, with small bangle chain attached. The name "Ed" in ename! the other side plain in center. The edge of bangle was cut like the edge of money.

One silver bangle—10c piece—one side engraved on a small pallet, the letters J. M. very plain; the other side, Feb. 25, 1836.

One gold ring with quartz setting.

One pair ear-rings, stone setting. The pendant of one ear-ring was lost before.

The first three articles were taken between Christmas and Feb. The last two articles with the money—$22 20—were taken March 10, 1830.

Sarcasm That Chills Enthusiasm and Kills Love in Many a Home.

If I am to kill a chicken (a thing I wouldn't do, my dear, for a thousand pounds!) I do not proceed to do the deed by cruel and protracted methods, writes "Amber" in the Chicago Tribune. I should be arrested by the Humane Society if I went to work to put poison in the doomed fowl's daily rations, or nip it slyly now and then with a red-hot hairpin.

The cat that was killed by care suffered far more than the cat that perished by a quick builet.

When a horse is disabled and unfit for service, the merciful man knocks it in the head with a well-aimed blow, and that's the last of it. But we have different ways of killing love, and trust, and kindly feeling in one another's hearts. We make use, all too often, of the North American Indian's eriginal method of protracted terture. And love, and trust, and kindly feeling, although they die hard, and are a long time dying, under the process, are as certainly doomed as the chicken, the cat and the disabled horse are by the blow of the hatchet, the sting of the builet or the crush of the club. There is many a home to-day where love is slowly dying under the torture inflicted by a sarcastic tongue, or where is already lies dead under the peculiar processes of this cowardly mode of torment. The drunkard's a sarcastic tongue, or where it already lies dead under the peculiar processes of this cowardly mode of torment. The drunkard's wife is not more to be pitied than the wife of the cold blooded husband whose tongue helds the venom of a dozen serpents. I would rather be mated to a man who should throw a chair at me now and then than to such a husband as we see occasionally, who murders his wife's peace and happiness slowly yet surely from day today with cruel and buting words of suspicion and contempt. I might dodge the chair, but I couldn't dodge the word, and, besides, bruises inflicted on the body heal under the application of limiment and arnica, but there has no salve been found yet to cure the hurt of a sarcastic tongue. There are many unhappy homes in the world, and many broken hearts, and there is a great cry raised against the causes therefor. A crusade is happy homes in the world, and many broken hearts, and there is a great cry raised against the causes therefor. A crusade is even being raised against the giant forces that combine to break up the harmony of domestic concord, yet the lesser influences for evil are ignored and forgotten. It is as though we armed ourselves to go out and shoot elephants in a country where rabbits were devastating the crops, or fitted out a fleet to catch whales in a fresh-water pondfull of eels and catfish. Intemperance, and unfaithfulness, and all the greater causes unfaithfulness, and all the greater causes of sorrow in the world's homes have always plenty of armed and steadfast opposers and foes, but the little hidden foxes that spoil the vines run to and fro without molesta-

It takes as much heroism often to sit down and endure for a half-hour the electric buzz-saw of a modern dentist as it takes to march to battle behind a drum and a flag; but who ever wrote a poem to the hero or heroine of the dentist's chair? It takes ore Christian grace to live in the same more Christian grace to live in the same house with a sarcastic tongue than to wear a hair-cloth shirt and do ante-sunrise penance, and yet who stops to say a word of comfort to the saint inured to domestic torment, or learn a lesson from her sublime patience and enduring courage? It is not going to be those who march up by and by and show saber cuts on the body who will be called heroes, but those who display scars made in the heart that were slently endured, who will wear the laurel and the endured, who will wear the laurel and the bay. We all pride ourselves on the eti-quette that teaches us to be gentlemen and ladies in the drawing-room or in public places, but when some of us have learned the etiquette that teaches us to be more gentlemanly and ladylike as fathers and nothers, sisters and brothers, parents and hildren, we shall have learned a new code. The man is a coward who is civil only the man is a coward who is civil only the man is a coward who is civil only the man is a coward who is civil only the man is a coward who is civil only the control of the control of the coward who is civil only the control of the company his home. What we need is less manner-ism for show, and more courtesy at home. You would never dare to speak te a lady in society, sir, as you speak to your wife and daughter, and I say you are the worst sort of a cad when you take a tone with the defenseless ones at home you would not dare assume to a stranger.

All politeness that is put on merely for show is like the stain the cabinet-maker puts on a pine board; politeness that amounts to any thing is in the grain of amounts to any thing is in the grain of the wood, not an external application. We make a terrible fuss when our growing children put a dinner knife to their lips, yet say nothing when they pester and harass one another with mean and sarcas-tic speeches until good nature files out the window and evil temper stalks in at the door.

window and evil temper stalks in at the door.

I will take my chance any day to live with the person who commits the solecism of putting his knife in his mouth rather than with the person who deals in anger-provoking speech and inuendo.

You take it greatly to heart when the slugs get into the roses and your June gardens are despoiled of their sweetness and beauty. And yet there is something worse that gets into the home, that garden of delight, when unkind and sarcastic speech creeps in with its chilling blight. I have in my mind's eye as I write a family of growing sons and daughters more desolate than any garden devoured by slugs or withered by devastating blight. The father sits over against every thing that is spontaneous and ardent and earnest with his cold and clammy ridicule; the older boys emulate their father, and the girls are ashamed to be fresh and natural and enthusiastic, as they were meant to be, for fear of evoking laughter and contempt. In the midst sits the mother, a dear little frightened morsel of a woman, full of poetic fancies and immortal enthusiasms stified and confined like so many infant Moseese in bulrush baskets, with Herod stalking up and down the bank.

If you must murder love, then, in the heart and home, wherein you go out and get drunk, or rob a bank, or skip to Canada with a defaulter's grip-sack; any thing, so that the deed is done quickly and poor innocent love be not a long time dying, like a victim on the rack.

A most curious statement is being made victim on the rack.

Queen Pla's Mustache.

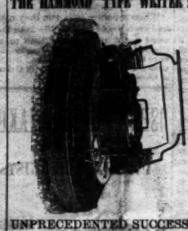

A most curious statement is being made about the Queen of Portugal. Not only has Maria Pla, it is said, a clearly-defined mustache on her upper lip, but she is positively proud of it. It is furthermore stated, evidently by a confirmed courtier, that this hirsute adornment suits admirably the Queen of Portugal's style of beauty. Who shall say, then, that this royal example will not effect a revolution in this particular direction! Hitherto the answers on toilet matters in the ladies journals have been largely devoted to directions to fair correspondents how they might get rid of the superfluous growth of hair on their upper lips and chins. But in future, possibly, toilet editors will be called on to recommend the best mustache developer for ladies whose "style of beauty" the musculine growth on the upper lip is supposed to suit.

One family who have found her invaluable recommend her to another, and she has obtained quite a clientage.

The Meanest Man Yet. An exchange says: A man living in this county, who owes over two years' subscription, put his paper back the postoffice maked "refused." We have heard of many mean men-We have heard of many mean menthere is the man who used the wart on his neck for a collar button, and who pastured a goat on his grandmother's grave, and one who stole the coppers from a dead nigger's eyes, and who got rich by giving his children a nickeleach to go to bed without their supper, and then stealing the nickels after the children were asleep—but for pure downright cussedness the man who will take a paper for two years, mark it "refused" and stick it back in the postoffice is entitled to first premium.

SCHOOL MATTERS.

Superintendent of Schools.

EDITOR GAZETTE: The school interest is one worthy of, and does receive general commendation, and it entitles the town to special recognition as an educational center. With the prospective increase of population and the fact of all the public school capacity in buildings, except the highest department, is now being fully utilized, the question of providing greater school facilities will soon have to be considered. The last school consus of Reno School District shows that there are new within its limits 936 children between the ages of six and eighteen years of age, against 777 of the year preceding, and against 606 in the year 1886, making an increase of more than fifty per cent. in school children in three years.

Through the kindness of Prof. Orvis Ring, Principal of the Public Schools, I have learned that there were on the first of March 635 pupils enrolled in the several departments of the schools, leaving 301 children of school age to the several departments of the schools, leaving 301 children of school age to be accounted for as not attending the leaving 301 children of school age to be accounted for as not attending the public schools.

I am indebted to the heads of the other institutions of learning for the statements that there are in the University about twenty children in the Training or Normal Department, fifteen of school age in the University proper, twenty-six in Bishop Whitaker's School, and about twenty belonging to the school district in Mt. St. Mary's Academy. A few are attending schools elsewhote who are included in the Census Marshal's report. This showing leaves about two hundred put ils within the district, less the number attending schools elsewhere, who are not availing themselves of school privileges, and doubtless many of those are between the ages of eight and fourteen years, between which ages the law requires each child to attend school at least sixteen weeks consecutively in each school year.

It is a difficult task to remedy this school year.

It is a difficult task to remedy this absenteeism. The law provides the means; but it imposes such a burden upon school trustees, who receive no compensation, that it is not enforced to the letter, as much as it is to be resulted anywhore in the State. to the letter, as much as it is to be regretted, anywhere in the State. Parents who have the means of education extended to their children as a gift are most culpable who fail to see that they do not avail themselves of the bousty of the State.

Were the whole number entitled to public instruction now in school, there would not be sufficient capacity to accommodate them, unless the half-day system is adopted in some of the rooms.

The fact of the increasing school pepulation demonstrates the growth of Reno and the necessity of considering the needs of more school house oom in the near future.

THE PHONOGRAPH.

If, ca they say, the phonograph Can talk and sing and cry and laugh, It, as a wonder, takes the cake And will a revolution make.

At home we'll hear the sweetest notes From prima donnas silvery throats; The finest orchestra will play Concerts and operas all day.

We'll hear the grand planists pound; Lectures and speeches will resound; The greatest actors will declaim, And all the preachers known to fame.

We'll hear loved voices from the tomb Without a "spirit" in the room— In fact, we need no longer roam, For we'll be entertained at home.

All agents who have things to hawk Will leave a phonograph to talk, And lovers can the question pop With this machine without a stop.

Wax figures with this thing inside, And with machinery to guide Their I fe-like motions, will be found In country pulpits all around.

Fo every little church unknown Can have a Talmage of its own, With waxen Pattis in the choir

The Mrs. Caudles now can sleep And leave a phonograph to heap Coal fires on their husbands, who Can't stop the lecture till it's through.

With this infernal thing let loose
And put to every kind of use
We shall be careful what we say,
For it will give us dead away.

Western Convention Where Every Seat Held a Delegate.

The large number of political conventions has reminded me of one of the first "State" conventions held in Dakota, writes Fred H.

has reminded me of one of the first "State" conventions held in Dakota, writes Fred H. Carruth in the New York Tribuns. The Territory was not, of course, a State, but that dan't hinder the politicians from holding a State convention once in awhile and putting in nomination a full State ticket, so in case Congress should admit the Territory the officers would be all ready to take their seats and begin drawing their pay.

At this convention some trouble was experienced in effecting an organization, as there were eleven candidates for charman, but it was finally accomplished by embracing an opportunity when eight of them had gone out to take a drink with one of the candidates for Secretary of State, and combining on one and electing him. Other routine work took up the day, and it was not till evening that the nomination of State officers was begun.

General White, the chairman, called the convention to order by pounding on the desk with a slung-shot covered with fine stamped leather, and poured out a glass of water and took a drink of it. The fine sense of humor possessed by the audience was so touched by this that it (the audience) broke into an applause which lasted nearly five minutes, the chairman meanwhile smiling sm

Nominations for Governor were called for, and Colonel Joe Reynolds presented the name of Senator A. H. Ransome, Major Hill that of Governor George Bird, Judge Dean Decker that of Hon. Jap Powers, Lieutenant Judkins that of Colonel Mixter, Commodore Harney that of Judge Tinton, and Senator Papelles.

that of Colonel Mixter, Commodore Harney that of Judge Tipton, and Senator Peoples that of Major Poindexter. Several others were also casually mentioned without having speeches made in their behalf.

It was rumored on the convention floor that there were a few other candidates coming outside on the run.

There was a great uproar all the way through and when it partially subsided it was found that Dr. Dave Skinner, of Strayhorse County, had got the sheet-iron drum of the stove just about worn out by pounding on it with an old iron pump-handle. A candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court, while applauding the name of Colonel Mixter, slipped up and fell on his back, injuring himself so that be had to be removed from the hall and carried to the bar-room of from the hall and carried to the bar-room of his hotel on a door. Governor Whitney, one of the oldest men in the convention, and extremely dignified, also got into a per-sonal aftercation near the middle of the ball with a man from Custer County, who was a candidate for State Treasurer, and before they could be separated the Gov-ernor had his coat torn off and watch-chain broken. The old gentleman would, how-ever, have reduced the number of prospect-ive State Treasurers if they had let him alone, as he had the man from Custer down and was yelling wildly and jumping on him with both feet when pulled off. Vic Smith, of Sentinel Butte, had just anvic Smith, of Sentinel Butte, had just announced that as the convention seemed unable to agree on its candidate for Governor, he had the names of three new candidates which he would take pleasure in presenting, when General Climber, who had come to the Territory from Missouri in 1862, got the floor, and said:

Instead of one Chief Executive we shall have a crowd reaching from Jim river to Sundown. Gentlemen, when the stranger from the wornout East comes among as and looks at our State House, which we expect to erect, and sees the feet of men sticking out of the windows, and asks in inquiring tones: Who are them wilderflukes with the tones: 'Who are them gilderflukes with the feet?' we shall have to answer him: 'State

Governors.'

Governors, gentlemen, rushing to the capital to take the oath of office!

"Our towns will be deserted and our fields lay barren while the people will be off waiting to get into a capital building to act as Governors, where Governors already stick out of the transoms.

"In that solemn hour, gentlemen, when they all hope to meet, in that hour when the least of these unto the greater hopes to come together, each with all the others, in that sweetly sad time—I refer, my friends, to when they assemble at the treasury to draw their pay—at that time, there won't be two bits apiece for them.

"Gentlemen, do we want to elect such a swarm of Governors! "Shall we depopulate this fair land for the make of being able to say that our highest Executive office can muster more men than the standing army! When one of our legislative bills is signed do we want to have to paste a roll of wall paper to it to accommodate the signatures of the Governors! Would it not be better, my friends, to throw overboard all these numerous and light-weight gentlemen who sapire to the office, and elect some large, brainy, able, scholarly, patriotic, dignified, polished and popular man and try to acrub such along with him as our Governor! Never heked in a fair fight and in the race to stay till the hide of the last opponent is hung on the fence?"

When the General sat down, which he did on the back of a chair with his feet on the seat, there was applause which caused the floor to break down in one corner and let three candidates for State Auditor down into the saloon below.

By splitting the top of the table in a couple of places with the slung-shot, the chairman finally restored order. A vote was called for, and General Climber insisted on voting first, regardless of any alphatetical arrangements, and cast the vote for himself. Others followed, and he was nominated almost unanimously, and of course afterward elected, as the Statebood uprising was a general rather than a party movement, and there was no other ticket in the field. The defeated candidates for Governor were passied by each being given something else; and by the creation of several new offices, such as Second Assistant State Treasurer, State Veterinary Surgeon, State Superintendent of Election Frauds, etc., enough were provided to go around and there were no bitter disappointments left to rankle in the besons of the defeated. The Committee on the Restriction of Liquor Selling then reported, recommending as its majority report for high license, and stating that Judge had imbibed a little too freely, and would not probably be able to stand on his feet and use parliamentary language fluently before the next morning, or possibly the day after. A motion to adjourn was then carried and the members went down and joined the three candidates for Anditor who had gone through the floor.

CAUGHT NAPPING.

A Good Story Told at the Expense of Kentucky's Junior Senator.

"Joe" Blackburn, as is well known, is not a great stickler for ceremony or official eliquette. The other day, says the New York Trbune's Washington correspondent, he lay stretched on a lounge in one of the rooms at the capitol, reviewing some committee report about to be submitted to the Senate. The air was suitry, there was scarcely any breeze stirring, and "Joe" feit as if he would never succeed in settling himself comfortably on that lounge. There was one consolation, however, in the thought that no office-seeker would be likely to disturb his rest on such a day. He was just taking another stretch on the lounge, and was about to take up again the committee report which he had temporarily laid aside to bury his nose in a bunch of mint, when one of the pages unceremoniously entered and gave him a card. Without rising "Joe" read the note on the card peevishly, with:

The visitor was a woman who had been twice dismissed from the Department of the Interior, and reinstated after the first dismissal on the recommendation of Senator Blackburn. He was unwilling, however, to interfere again, as he was confident that she did not deserve it.

"I can not see her," he said, impatiently. "Get rid of her any way. Tell her I'm asleep, or any thing you like."
